

People have a right to the truth. If much of the media is owned and controlled by one person/company reporting will mirror the beliefs only of that entity - but if a person/company with opposite views controls competing media - the truth is more likely to be told by both parties.